TRAVEL - How to reach Turin!

Turin - Caselle Airport

Caselle Airport is very easily connected to the city centre. The bus stop is located in front of the airport building and is easy to find. You can buy a ticket inside the airport, at the arrival entrance or directly on the bus.

You can choose among different options from the Caselle Airport to the city center:

- Option 1: Bus

Taking a direct bus to the city center is the most convenient way to get to the city from the airport (or vice versa). The shuttle bus service from Turin-Caselle airport to the city center is offered by 2 different companies:

- flibco.com. It operates daily, with a frequency of 30 minutes. The ticket costs EUR 6.99 one way (EUR 9.98 return), and the journey time is only 25 minutes.

- Arriva Italia. One way tickets cost EUR 7.50. (round trip promotion at EUR 11.00). You can buy tickets via Arriva Italia App or pay directly on board with your contactless credit card

Here you can find more information.

- Option 2: Train

The railway line connects Turin Airport with Turin Porta Susa station in about half an hour, 7 days a week.

Departures from Turin Porta Susa: on weekdays, first departure at 05.01, last departure at 21.25.
Departures from Turin Airport: on weekdays, first departure at 06.00, last departure at 22.28.

The airport station is located opposite the Arrivals area of the terminal.

Here you have more information and train timetable.

- Option 3: Taxi

A taxi ride from Turin airport to the city center takes about 30 minutes. The fixed fare is 34 euro.

Other convenient airports to get to Turin are Milano Malpensa Airport and Bergamo Airport.

Milano - Malpensa (MXP) Airport

TIPS FOR YOUR FREE TIME

Egyptian Museum | Turin www.museoegizio.it/en/

The Egyptian Museum is the world's oldest museum devoted entirely to ancient Egyptian culture. Discover the fundamental stages of its formation, from the creation of the collection to the present. Already in 1832, however, the Museum was opened to the public. Between 1903 and 1937, the archaeological excavations conducted in Egypt by Ernesto Schiaparelli and then by Giulio Farina brought some 30,000 artefacts to Turin. The Museum underwent a first reorganisation of the rooms in 1908, and a second, more important one, in 1924, with the official visit by the king. In this respect, to compensate for the lack of space, Schiaparelli restructured the new wing of the Museum, then called the “Schiaparelli wing”, where he exhibited finds from Assiut and Gebelein.

Cinema Museum | Turin https://www.museocinema.it/en

Experience the thrill of the cinema inside the Mole Antonelliana! One of the most exciting exhibitions about cinema you'll ever see: against a backdrop of sets, projections and light shows, the spectacular displays will bring your visit to life and immerse you in the magic of the cinema, just like when you're watching a movie. Discover first-hand the secrets of what goes on behind the camera and all the stages that go into making a film along a fun and interactive route: from shadow puppetry and early magic lanterns to the most spectacular special effects in modern cinema and virtual reality.

Royal Museums | Turin https://museireali.beniculturali.it/plan-your-visit/

The Royal Museums of Turin are one of the largest and most varied museum complexes in Europe and are equal in size and value to the largest European royal residences. They are located in the heart of the ancient city and offer an itinerary of history, art and nature that winds its way through more than 3 km of museum promenade over 30,000 square metres of exhibition and storage space, 7 hectares of gardens, with testimonies dating from Prehistory to the modern age. Their origin dates back to 1563, when Emanuele Filiberto of Savoy moved the capital of the duchy from Chambéry to Turin and began the great urban transformation and enrichment of the dynastic collections. Between the 17th and 18th centuries, the residence, with the majestic Royal Palace at its centre, expanded in the form of a city following the orthogonal scheme of the first urban extension towards the river Po. Inhabited by the Savoy family until 1946, it is now the property of the Italian state.

Reggia di Venaria| Venaria Reale https://goo.gl/maps/DwKSBAPXxaxCBFp69

The Palace of Venaria (Italian: Reggia di Venaria Reale) is a former royal residence and gardens located in Venaria Reale, near the city of Turin in the Piedmont region in northern Italy. It is one of the 14 residences of the royal House of Savoy built in the area between the 16th and 18th centuries which were collectively designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1997.
The Palace was designed and built from 1675 by Amedeo di Castellamonte, commissioned by duke Charles Emmanuel II, who needed a base for his hunting expeditions in the heathy hill country north of Turin. The name itself derives from the Latin phrase Venatio Regia meaning "Royal Hunt".

Valentino Park | Turin https://goo.gl/maps/DwKSBAPXxaxCBFp69

The oldest and best-known park in Torino, criss-crossed with tree-lined paths and cycle tracks, is ideal for a pleasant break immersed in nature, on foot or by bike. The main entrance is through the Arco monumentale all'Artigliere (Monumental Arch to the Artilleryman) by Pietro Canonica (1930), and the park's 550,000 sq.metres makes it the "green lung" of Torino. It was designed as a public park for the city during the midnineteenth century by the landscape gardener Barrilet- Deschamps. On the opposite bank, overlooking the Po, are the rowing clubs and many characteristic haunts of Borgo Crimea. Located in the park, the Orto Botanico (Botanical Garden), opened in 1729, with an orangery, heated greenhouse and herbarium-museum, nowadays boasts a collection of over 4,000 species of local flora and medicinal herbs. The "Boschetto" (grove) of exotic species dates back to 1830-40.

Parco Dora | Turin https://maps.app.goo.gl/X9v6ynydNFkzKKJT8

Among the various parks in Turin, there is a very unconventional one, more like a huge open-air art installation than a real park. However, it is precisely this peculiarity that has made it so special that in a short time it has become one of the most popular parks for young and not-so-young Torinese alike. We are talking about Parco Dora, the city's large post-industrial park covering some 456,000 square metres in the Spina 3 area of Turin, where the large Fiat and Michelin production plants stood until the 1990s.

Parco Dora is truly a special place that is the result of the recovery of an area previously used for something else and that fits well into the large project for the recovery of abandoned industrial areas. It is now a meeting place for young and old, families, and fans of urban sports such as roller skating and skateboarding. A different park that is absolutely worth a visit.

Historic cafes

If you're in Turin for a few days, you can't miss a visit to one of the city's historic cafés, the old 19th-century establishments where you can taste the typical delicacies of the Piemonte.

Among the antique mirrors, boiserie, satin upholstery, elegant candlesticks and porcelain plates, you can taste some of Turin's specialties and take a little trip back in time. (https://italysegreta.com/historic-coffee-houses-in-turin/)
